

When you give food items, you are saying:

- "I value the lives of those in our community."
- "I care about the health, nourishment, comfort, and wellness of others."
- "I don't have to know someone well--or even at all--in order to care about them and support them."
- "I care about the kind of community in which I live, and I will use my actions to grow a community that will not marginalize those without food."
- "In a community, we help each other."

When you give food to those in need of food, you are saying, "I care about you. I care that you are well, and that you have what you need. I care that you are a part of this community; you belong here, and I value your life."

Thank you, Neighbors, for caring.

When you give food items, you are saying:

- "I value the lives of those in our community."
- "I care about the health, nourishment, comfort, and wellness of others."
- "I don't have to know someone well--or even at all--in order to care about them and support them."
- "I care about the kind of community in which I live, and I will use my actions to grow a community that will not marginalize those without food."
- "In a community, we help each other."

When you give food to those in need of food, you are saying, "I care about you. I care that you are well, and that you have what you need. I care that you are a part of this community; you belong here, and I value your life."

Thank you, Neighbors, for caring.

When you give food items, you are saying:

- "I value the lives of those in our community."
- "I care about the health, nourishment, comfort, and wellness of others."
- "I don't have to know someone well--or even at all--in order to care about them and support them."
- "I care about the kind of community in which I live, and I will use my actions to grow a community that will not marginalize those without food."
- "In a community, we help each other."

When you give food to those in need of food, you are saying, "I care about you. I care that you are well, and that you have what you need. I care that you are a part of this community; you belong here, and I value your life."

Thank you, Neighbors, for caring.

When you give food items, you are saying:

- "I value the lives of those in our community."
- "I care about the health, nourishment, comfort, and wellness of others."
- "I don't have to know someone well--or even at all--in order to care about them and support them."
- "I care about the kind of community in which I live, and I will use my actions to grow a community that will not marginalize those without food."
- "In a community, we help each other."

When you give food to those in need of food, you are saying, "I care about you. I care that you are well, and that you have what you need. I care that you are a part of this community; you belong here, and I value your life."

Thank you, Neighbors, for caring.

